

Brazier to spend time coaching in Japan
Otago Daily Times

WELLINGTON: Black Ferns Sevens player Kelly Brazier will take a short-term sabbatical later this year to coach in Japan. Brazier will coach the Brave Louve in the Taiyo Seimei Women's Sevens Series.

She is the second Black Ferns Sevens player to take a sabbatical, with captain Sarah Hirini recently announcing she would spend some time playing sevens in Japan.

Like Hirini, playmaker Brazier will complete the World Sevens Series in Toulouse before taking up her coaching contract as the spot coach for the Brave Louve.

Following the Taiyo Seimei series, Brazier will return to New Zealand to prepare for the 2024 Paris Olympic Games with the Black Ferns Sevens.

Brazier is looking forward to the challenge.

"I am very excited for the opportunity for myself and my family to live abroad. It will be a great experience for us all.

"But more importantly, it provides me with a pathway to do something I'm passionate about while still playing.

"It will be a massive learning experience, which is hugely exciting. Through this time, I will be soaking up as much as I can, developing my knowledge, learning and growing as a coach."

Black Ferns Sevens coach Cory Sweeney said it was a fantastic opportunity for Brazier.

"Kelly is an integral part of our team's success, and this is a great chance for her to grow as a coach and pursue her aspirations off the field," Sweeney said.

"Throughout her time with the Black Ferns Sevens, we have continued to assist her in developing her coaching craft, and she has never shied away from being involved.

"This is the perfect chance for Kelly to learn, grow and be challenged in a new environment."

— RNZ

RUGBY

Brazier to spend time coaching in Japan

WELLINGTON: Black Ferns Sevens player Kelly Brazier will take a short-term sabbatical later this year to coach in Japan.

Brazier will coach the Brave Louve in the Taiyo Seimei Women's Sevens Series.

She is the second Black Ferns Sevens player to take a sabbatical, with captain Sarah Hirini recently announcing she would spend some time playing sevens in Japan.

Like Hirini, playmaker Brazier will complete the World Sevens Series in Toulouse before taking up her coaching contract as the spot coach for the Brave Louve.

Following the Taiyo Seimei series, Brazier will return to New Zealand to prepare for the 2024 Paris Olympic Games with the Black Ferns Sevens.

Brazier is looking forward to the challenge.

"I am very excited for the opportunity for myself and my family to live abroad. It will be a great experience for us all.

"But more importantly, it provides me with a pathway to do something I'm passionate about while still playing.

"It will be a massive learning experience, which is hugely exciting. Through this time, I will be soaking up as much as I can, developing my knowledge, learning and growing as a coach."

Black Ferns Sevens coach Cory Sweeney said it was a fantastic opportunity for Brazier.

"Kelly is an integral part of our team's success, and this is a great chance for her to grow as a coach and pursue her aspirations off the field," Sweeney said.

"Throughout her time with the Black Ferns Sevens, we have continued to assist her in developing her coaching craft, and she has never shied away from being involved.

"This is the perfect chance for Kelly to learn, grow and be challenged in a new environment."

— RNZ

